On several occasions since, I have taken this medicine with good results. I have often advised friends and acquaintances whom I have heard complaining of backache to try Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Churchill had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

The Modern Motorist's Freedom.

With more than three million cars in use in the country, as there will be before the summer ends, and allowing the minimum of three passengers per vehicle, nearly a tenth of our total population will be motoring during 1916. This is undoubtedly a record in wholesale public amusement. One of the chief charms of this automobile touring is the relief from responsibility that it brings. Time and space have relaxed their hold on the man in the car, if they have not entirely released him. The limitations of the time-table are not for him. He may come and go, subject only to the dictates of his own fancy. It is travel under conditions of freedom that have never before been approached.—Alexander Johnston in The Countryside Magazine for August.

Elmer, 10-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lien of St. Cloud, Minn., was drowned by falling into an ice cream freezer partly filled with water.

Joseph S. Uetovich of Lawrence, Mass., was killed when he lost his hold on the side of a trolley car on which he was stealing a ride Monday night. He fell under the wheels of the car.

Marsh through the chimney and tore off paper and plaster. At E. P. Walbridge's it did some damage around the water pipes in the sink and slight damage was done at the M. E. parsonage.

NORWICH UNIVERSITY

The Norwich boys encamped at Fort Ethan Allen are once again in high spirits, for they hope to go to the border soon. At the calling out of the militia the latter part of June, nearly 90 per cent of the Norwich cadets volunteered to serve with the first Vermont cavalry. They went into camp at Fort Ethan Allen with the expectation of soon going to the border. Time went on without their receiving orders to leave, and they began to fret over the delay. Then the government decided not to raise a cavalry regiment in Vermont, the boys were transferred to the first Vermont infantry, and once more they expected to go to once. Once more they were delayed. Now, however, they have been organized into a machine gun company, a supply company and a headquarters company (mounted scouts), and the orders to join their regiment at Eagle Pass are expected at any time. So smiles are once more seen on the campground and there is bustle and activity on every side. But were would once more about if this also proved to be only a wild rumor.

The only Norwich undergraduate to reach the border so far is Sergeant Major Harry P. Shaw, who, by the way, entered Norwich from the canal zone. Sergeant Shaw is acting as field secretary to Colonel Reeves of the first Vermont infantry. He was among the first to reach Private Chaffee of Company F when he was burned by the explosion of an oil can. Colonel Reeves was the first man to get to him and Sergeant Shaw was a close second. They rolled Chaffee in blankets, but the burns were too severe and he died within a few days.

There are many Norwich graduates in the militia of the different states and in the regular army, nearly all of them commissioned officers. W. H. Munsell, '14, is in the Springfield, Vt., company as first lieutenant; John D. Murphy, '15, is quartermaster with the ninth Massachusetts; F. B. Thomas, '06, is lieutenant colonel of the first Vermont; H. B. S. Burwell, '13, is a second lieutenant in the 13th U. S. cavalry and is now somewhere in Mexico, and many others are either in some of the militia organizations or with the regulars on the border.

Colonel Reeves of the first Vermont infantry is president of Norwich university, having been inaugurated just one day before he joined his regiment at Fort Ethan Allen. Incidentally, we note that the first Vermont is called the best behaved regiment in Eagle Pass.

A Ballot in Favor of Decency.

The August Woman's Home Companion says in reference to its campaign for cleaner movie films:

"The manufacturers of indecent films, the publishers of indecent magazines can be touched in only one point—their pocketbooks."

"Just as long as there is sufficient public demand for their type of product to make it very profitable, they will continue to supply that demand."

"But let them detect a quickening of the public conscience against them, a crystallization of active, intelligent sentiment making itself felt upon the local theatre owner and the local newsdealer, and their rush for the banks of virtue will take on the character of a stampede."

"If 5,000 families were to write this week to the magazines that have chiefly offended against decency by their covers, their illustrations and their fiction, saying, 'I will never have your magazine in my home again, and want you to know that I consider it unfit for family reading; do you think that would have any influence?'"

"Let me tell you that the effect of such a protest would be perfectly tremendous."

Below this comment is printed a ballot in favor of decency.

Life in Mexico City.

In the August Woman's Home Companion Katharine Holland Brown has a short story describing the life of Americans in Mexico. In it an American woman says:

"I'm getting so case-hardened that, night before last, when I awoke at midnight to a flight of hoofs and a clatter of wild shots, I didn't even shake Jim awake. Instead, I dropped off again, with hardly a blink. But three hours later, I woke with a start and sat up in the blackness, my heart leaping. Distant shouts; a faint pop-pop of rifles then—long, dull, far-away thunder. Cannon."

"Jimmy!" I had him by the hair, double quick. 'Bombardment! The city! Wake up!'"

"Lemme 'lone,' begged Jim from slumbrous depths. 'Nothin' but cannon—'"

"But, Jimmy—"

"Ten miles 'way—long's they don't die on our doorstep—what's the difference?"

THE RURAL CREDITS BILL

Why Senator Page voted against it. The Bill of no possible value to the Farmer, but on the contrary, Absolutely Hostile to the interests of Vermont. It Exempts from Taxation the Investments of the Money Lender and Transfers the Burden to the Back of the Farmer.. The following letter is self-explanatory:

Washington, D. C., July 26, 1916.

MR. MERLE MACALLISTER,

Editor, The Vermont Advance,
Burlington, Vermont.

My dear Sir:

I recall that when I met you a few weeks since, you asked me if I would write for The Advance a brief article giving my reasons for voting against the Rural Credits bill. I told you that it would give me pleasure to do so, and I now comply with your request.

Lest my position be misunderstood, let me say at the outset that I have an abiding faith that the farmers of Vermont need no assurance that every fibre of my make-up is loyal to their interests. This being the case, I deem it only necessary to give you a simple story as to my part of the labor performed in the formulation of the Rural Credits bill.

This bill was introduced in the Senate January 3d, and was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, of which I am a member. That I spent many hard hours of service, laboring earnestly to perfect the measure so that it might be of the greatest possible help to the farming interests of the South and far West, is known to every member of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

It is true that in the earlier consideration of the Rural Credits bill in the committee it was the unanimous opinion of that committee that the bill could be of no real value to the farmers of the East. It was confessed by every member of the committee that its investigations were conclusive upon that point and that there was no reasonable expectation on the part of the friends of the bill that it could be of any practical benefit to any section of the country east of Ohio. Indeed, it was not expected that it would be of very much value in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. The reasons for this were obvious, as the rates for money on farm mortgages in the East and middle West range from 5 to 6 per cent. Passing south of the Ohio river and west of the Mississippi, however, the rates, for reasons which it is not necessary to discuss in this communication, increase until a 10 per cent. rate is reached in some sections on the Pacific Coast.

The fact that the East would not be benefited by this measure was not urged against the bill, as every member of the Committee on Banking and Currency labored with a desire to lighten the burden of the farmers in the states where the extreme rates of interest prevailed.

There came a time, however, in the considerations of the committee, when the question arose as to exempting the notes or bonds issued under the Rural Credits bill from every form of taxation, placing them on a parity with U. S. Government bonds.

Whether it would or would not be right to say that the state of Vermont or any other state must not tax its own property within its own borders was a question upon which the members of the Committee on Banking and Currency divided. Under the provisions of the bill, any moneyed man in Vermont can invest his funds in this Rural Credits paper and laugh at the assessors when they ask him to contribute his share to the support of the schools, highways and other expenses of conducting state and municipal affairs.

During all the discussions of this measure by the Vermont press, not the slightest mention, so far as I can recall, has ever been made of this tax-exemption feature of the Rural Credits bill. Every Vermont farmer understands that when you take the burden of taxation from any one class of our people, that burden is immediately transferred, in very large measure, to the back of the farmer.

TO ALLEN M. FLETCHER:

No Republican member of the United States Senate coming from the 14 states east of Illinois and Michigan, including West Virginia, believed this Rural Credits bill worthy of his vote. Had you been a senator of the United States, would you have voted for this Rural Credits bill, thus transferring additional burdens of taxation from the money lender to the farmer?

I plead with the committee to strike out this provision of the bill, saying to them that I greatly desired to support the measure if I could. I was most anxious that the farmers of the South and West should be aided in every reasonable way. No member of the committee, however, presumed to say for a single moment that the eastern section of our country would be benefited by this act, and it seemed to me that I should be unfaithful to my constituents in Vermont if I did not protest with all the vigor in my power against the passage of the measure with this tax-exemption clause included.

Although not a lawyer, as every Vermonter knows, I insisted that the Federal constitution provided that all powers not specially delegated to the Federal Government were reserved to the states, and that I knew of no clause in the constitution which delegated to the Federal Government the power to say to the State of Vermont that—aside from Government bonds—it should be deprived of the power to tax the property within its borders as the state saw fit to do.

I went to several of the best constitutional lawyers in the United States Senate and placed this feature of the bill before them, and they were clear that in passing this act the Federal Government was assuming unwarranted control over the private affairs of the several states.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, one of the ablest constitutional lawyers in the Senate, made an extended argument upon this point, showing, as it seemed to be conclusively, that the Federal Government has not the right to say that, aside from Government bonds, we may not tax our own property within our own boundaries, in whatever form or of whatever kind that property may be.

I became so thoroughly confirmed in the conviction that the bonds issued under this act should not be exempt from taxation that I gave notice in the committee
